A Response to the Montreal Massacre
A Native Viewpoint

By any one's standards, the Montreal massacre of fourteen women is a tragedy for all humankind and a loss of immense human talent. The Montreal massacre can be seen as a symbolic act that subjected to physical death, but they also face emotional and spiritual death.

Based on the severity of this issue, I do not feel that one day of mourning fully address the problem. This is an issue that we should be mourning on a daily basis.

Not only is this issue indicative of women in general, but it is even more severe for Native women. Not only do Native women have to face gender discrimination, but they also must face racial discrimination such as stereo-typing. As a result, Native women receive a double bow.

The effects of this discrimination is revealed in the startling statistics on Native women:

The Canadian Bar association Report in 1988 found:

"Native women make up almost all the inmate population in the Yukon and Labrador and over 70% in the Northwest Territories, Manitoba and Saskatchewan."

and the Aboriginal Justice Inquiry of Manitoba in 1991 stated:

"Native women live 28 years less than non-Native women".

For First Nations people, this discrimination of our women is a relatively recent development, for prior to contact, our communities practiced equal suffrage and government by consensus. Women were not treated as inferiors, but instead they were treated as equals participating in all aspects of life. Yet, in today's Western society, this is not the case, for our women have been degraded and subjected to extreme prejudicial treatment.

In closing, I feel that society at large can learn a great deal from traditional Native values. For traditionally, women shared an equal position with men stressing the elements of balance, harmony and co-operation. Only through equality of the sexes can the issue of violence against all women be effectively resolved.

In Rememberance
Darcy Noelle Kemp

On Thursday December 5, 1991, Darcy Noelle Kemp, fifteen days before her 23rd Birthday, was killed in a car accident.

Darcy lived in University College Residence her first three years at Laurentian. In her third year she won University College's award for the Most Sportsmanlike Female. Her fourth year, 1990/91 she lived in Single Students Residence.

In the Spring of 1991 she graduated with an honours degree in Psychology.

An award in memory of Darcy will be available to a psychology student on behalf of Darcy's parents. An award in memory of Darcy will also be available at her highschool, in North Bay, on behalf of her friends.

Darcy, it's hard to believe you're not just a phone call away- you are always in our thoughts, we love you and miss you....-until we meet again.

Shelly Martel. Play it Again!

Chris Land
Editor-in-Chief

Why is it that Shelly Martel just cannot keep herself out of trouble? For the second time in a single year, our infamous Minister of Northern Development has put her mouth in motion before she had her brain in gear, prompting renewed calls for her resignation from the opposition.

I remember back when the NDP government was elected in Ontario. I thought then that I would certainly have reason to criticize the government on matters of policy, considering my own political orientation. I foresaw myself criticizing government spending and unnecessary extension of social welfare programs, but I was never prepared for this.

After a year and a bit even I am surprised at the utter incompetence of this government. If you put aside the 10 billion dollar deficit and the removal of the oath to the Queen for holders of government office, this government has been a nightmare for its lack of simple competence. Right at the beginning, a few ministers had to be fired because they screwed up. That is to be expected in a new government. After that, Martel was caught for trying to influence a judicial board in a criminal proceeding.

When this happened I thought that while Martel had demonstrated gross stupidity, it still appeared that she had her heart in the right place. After all, she was lobbying the College of Physicians and Surgeons to have a doctor, who had been convicted of molesting patients, banned from the practice of medicine. It seemed pretty straight forward at the time. While Ministers of the Crown must never use their office to influence impartial judicial proceedings, at least it seems that she had the welfare of the people at heart.

When this government came to power I thought that even though I would probably disagree with their programs, at least they would be honest. Now, just prior to the Christmas holidays Shelly Martel gets into trouble for bragging at a party that she has a Sudbury doctor over a barrel for overbilling OHIP. When she gets caught for making these indiscreet comments, her defence is to say that she lied when making them.

What are the people of Sudbury to think? The first time she screws up we forgive her because her heart was in the right place. A stupid thing to do but she's still a good person

Laurentian University Presents its first University-Community Lecture

Dr. Paul Cappon, Vice-President, Academic at Laurentian University, presents "The Politics of Health", the first lecture in his new University-Community Lecture Series, on Thursday, January 30, 1992 at 7:30 p.m. in the Alphonse Raymond Auditorium (School of Education). Admission is free; the public is welcome.

This lecture deals with that side of health sciences and the health system which many of us prefer to overlook; the politics of public health. This is the flip side of our image of heroic medical practitioners struggling to preserve life against the ravages of aging and the environment. It is the side of medicine that involves difficult (often painful) social and ethical choices from which no pat answers or technological miracles can spare us.

In "The Politics of Health", Paul Cappon, M.D., Ph.D., addresses these issues from both an academic and a community-based point of view. Academics must address societal and political questions of health, says Dr. Cappon, because they affect the lives and families of virtually every citizen. These questions include:

- What limits should we impose on human genetic engineering?

- Can society control the development of reproductive technology, or should it be left in the hands of practitioners?

- Will the growing acceptance of euthanasia create pressure for diminished health care for the aged and gravely ill?

- should sexually irresponsible carriers of the AIDS virus (or other infectious diseases) be quarantined?

- How can we limit growing health expenditures in a society which is aging?

- Can the physician-patient relationship be altered so that power and responsibility are more equally shared?

- How can we learn which environmental agents are harmful to our health?

Conscious, informed choices must be made where such social and ethical questions in health care fall within the political dimension. It is easier to ask these questions than to answer them. But "The Politics of Health" explores important principles that can help us respond:

- Private acts can have social consequences for health.

- Differences of opinion are valid; tolerance of ambiguity and uncertainty is a sign of social maturity

- People must take individual and collective responsibility for their own health.

-Most importantly, the public must become knowledgeable about health issues and should participate in health debates, instead of leaving all decisions in the hands of "the experts".

Note: The lecture will be presented in English. The full text will be available in French at the lecture, and questions/discussions in either official language are welcome.

who deserves a second chance. Then she does it again. Was she drunk when she made those comments or is she just as stupid as she has demonstrated to the public? The worst part of this whole fiasco is that Shelly Martel has been raised almost from birth to hold public office. She is supposed to be one of the best ministers in Rae's cabinet. If she's the best, Bob Rae must lead a government of bumbling fools.

Consider for a moment some of my originally conceived notions of this government. They were made up of people who have always stated that they looked out for the average person and had our welfare at heart. Now we see that one of their ministers has tried to improperly influence a judicial board and then uses lying as an excuse for making malicious comments about a Sudbury doctor at a party. Hmmm. Manipulators and liars. Maybe the NDP government isn't as honest as I originally thought they were.

OPEN FORUM ON CONSTITUTION

Mr. Rosario Marchese, Parliamentary Assistant to the Ontario Premier and the Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs, will be at Laurentian University on Monday, January 27, 1992, at 7:30p.m. in the Alphonse Raymond Auditorium to hold a discussion forum on "The Social Charter in the Canadian Constitution." The forum is designed as a diologue between the Ontario government and the public about the proposed social charter. Mr. Marchese will present information on the Ontario government's proposals and then will open the floor for discussion and commentary from the audience. He will take the public's response back to the Premier of Ontario for consideration. The forum is free of charge and everyone is welcome.

GRAND CANYON
A MOVIE PREVIEW

In 1991 Los Angeles, six people's lives intertwine in a way that will mark them forever. Transformed by a series of unsettling and often surprising encounters, these six— family, friends and strangers— come together in writer-director-producer Lawrence Kasdan's probing look at his adopted home. As the world around them careens seemingly out of control, each tries to bring a semblance of civilization to his life— and to keep the fear at bay.

This film brings together (in alphabetical order) Danny Glover, Kevin Kline, Steve Martin, Mary McDonnell, Marylouise Parker and Alfre Woodard. Kasdan's "Grand Canyon" a Twentieth Century Fox production, is a drama about big city dwellers grappling with the harsh realities of contemporary urban life. With humor and compassion, they forge unlikely friendships amid the chaos and begin to recognize the miracles around them.

In the 80's he brought us "The Big Chill". Welcome to the 90's.

Barbara Astman

(Sudbury)...Canadian Artist Barbara Astman's mixed media paintings will be on display at the Art Centre, 251 John Street, from January 15 to February 9, 1992.

The exhibition is called Fruit Series. Astman has applied wax and pigment to the surface of 16 very large photographs.

"We are all aware as consumers how beauty and desirability in humans and objects is portrayed in western society," the artist says.

"I became increasingly fascinated by the reverse of the portrayal, and I began searching out the defects. The resulting photographs...became a metaphor for the beauty of decay."

This exhibition is organized through "Artists with their Works," Art Gallery of Ontario. It is part of AGO 25 Artreach, a celebration of 25 years of partnership between the Art Gallery of Ontario and the province.

Journalism as a career

ARE YOU GRADUATING this spring and considering becoming a journalist? As a university graduate, you may be eligible for up to one year of advanced standing towards a diploma in Journalism.

Cambrian College's two-year Journalism Program combines theory with practical experience. For almost twenty years, this program has prepared graduates to enter the world of print journalism or one of many related fields.

In the first year, students get a grounding in news writing and reporting, news judgment, news photography, layout and ethics.

Second year students build on these basic skills and take over responsibility for the operation of the lab paper, The Shield. Publishing a weekly paper provides the practical experience that prepares our graduates for this satisfying career.

For further information, contact Geoffrey Cudmore, Chair of Communication and Creative Arts, at (705) 566-8101, extension 7735.

Committed to employment and education equity.

The JFK Firestorm

by Piotr Przychodzki.

Oliver Stone has started a fire storm that is comparable to the passionate reaction to Orson Well's Citizen Kane.It gives over 3 hours of catalysts for extreme reaction to the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy on November 22, 1963, the president of USA. It's technical wizardry that would probably stagger Wells. It unfolds the elaborate conspiracy behind the killing. There have been numerous books written on the topic, among them Contract on America, by David Scheim. This movie seems a creative evolution to all those publications.

It also completes what would appear as the final part of trilogy on the war mentality sported Americans since the Second World War. First it was Platoon, then Born on the Fourth of July and now JFK explore it in different intensities and variable depths. Except there is no apocalyptic visions of Vietnam, no tales of over zealous soldiers suffering from future shock. Instead there is the exploration of the greed and corruption of the American government at its highest levels. Such notion is familiar to Canadians. The establishment that has used Vietnam as a polygon for military exercises. The fact that Oliver has so many people upset on one side and so many dazzled on the other side is not a surprise. This reaches deeply into the soul of Americans.

It is a cinematic marvel. It is well edited, and acted and photographed. It is somewhat like Beethoven's concertos, complete and powerful leaving every thing to the passionate interpretation. It leaves the audience in the same shock that was evoked by Born on the Fourth of July and Platoon. First you go out of the theater checking for snipers while your head does the three sixty perimeter check. You might even ask yourself what a mess this world has become.

The only objection that should be pointed out is that through the eyes of Jim Garrison, Kennedy acquires the persona of a visionary hero. We all know that Kennedy, despite his political activities, was after all a very corrupt man. His womanizing throughout his marriage and the dirty meddling in Canadian politics make him a man far too distant from an moral ideal. Yet to judge him was not the point of this movie. The point of it was the questioning of the American establishment, the very same that continues to rule U.S. into extinction along with Canada. The same establishment that sticks the American dream like a carrot in front of the people while it covers its greed in a blanket democracy and freedom.

Laurentian Lust

By Silvanna E. Xavier

The other day, while standing at a supermarket checkout counter, I picked up a book by that literary giant, Danielle Steele. It was a stunning novel of excitement, adventure, passion and lust, and I thought to myself, "why don't I write my own romance novel?" So I did.....

Chapter 1.

President Crystal Amberly St. James stood at the window of her luxurious office on the 11th floor of the R.D. Parker building and gazed reflectively at the ivy covered buildings of Laurentian University. It was hard to believe that a year ago she had been a struggling anthropologist who spent her days labeling and catagorizing coprolites in a disease infested, third-world, archaeological dig site. But her diligent studies had paid off and she had won the Nobel prize for her ground -breaking work on prehistoric rodent excrement.

Soon after, she had been approached by such prestigious Universities as Harvard, Oxford, and Cambridge who had begged her to continue her studies at their institutions. However, it was Laurentian University that really caught her eye. Not only did they offer her the prestigious job of university president, but they enticed her with additional benefits such as a reserved parking spot, a free coffee card for the Great Hall cafeteria, and a valuable subscription to Lambda, the official student newspaper. How could she refuse?

Crystal sat down in her plush plastic chair and sighed contently. Her meteoric rise to power had brought other advantages as well. She was able to move in more influential social circles and, as a result, she had met the stunningly handsome Dr. Brett Stallion. Brett had been her muscular, firm buttocked lover for over six months, and whenever she thought of his piecing blue eyes and rugged good looks, her heart melted like a warm ice-cube. But it was more than Brett's sexual prowess that had attracted her to him; she loved him for his brilliant mind, and his compassionate caring soul.

Although Brett was the chief rocket propulsion engineer at N.A.S.A. and won the distinguished Flying Cross as a Navy jet-fighter pilot, he preferred to donate his time to the local Y.M.C.A. where he taught underprivileged and handicapped children how to swim.

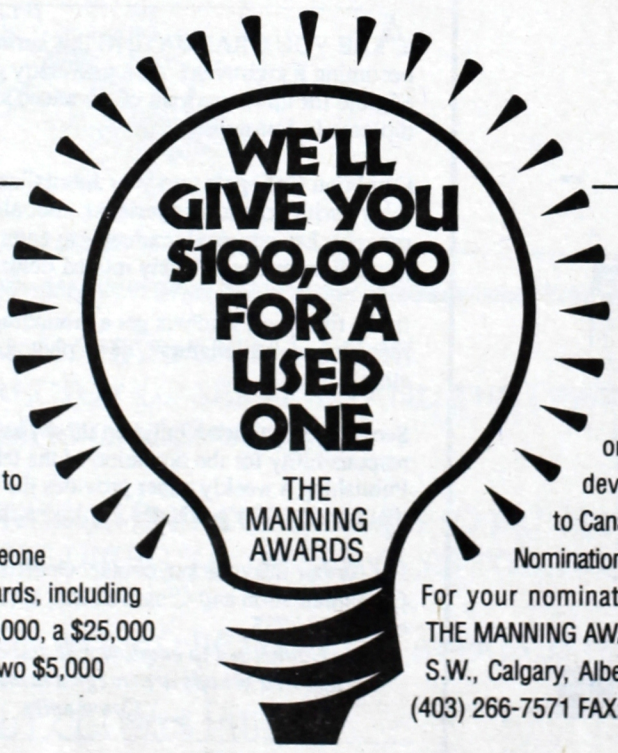

Today was Brett's birthday, and Crystal thought she would surprise him by showing up at the Y.M.C.A: She informed her secretary that she would be in a "meeting" for the rest of the day, then she took the express elevator down to her Porsche.

When Crystal arrived, she asked the Y.M.C.A. receptionist where she would find Brett. She was directed to the massage room. To her shock, she found Brett rubbing baby oil onto the back of a scantily clad blond - of the bimbo persuasion.

"Brett, you bastard!" she screamed, and hurled her present from Birks Jewelers at him. It hit him squarely in the jaw.

"Ouch! Wait, I can explain." he called after her, but it was too late. She had already stormed out of the building...

SALUTING CANADIAN INNOVATION

The Peer assistants received a complaint from a concerned student regarding soliciting within the residence. It seems a group of students pulled a fast one over a lot of students in both Single Students Residence and University College Residence. This group entered rooms and sold magazines to the residents without the student being aware he or she had bought one until it was too late.

When we contacted Paulette Lafortune she informed us that soliciting was not allowed at all in residence. When we contacted the other residences we found out that they also do not allow soliciting. So this group of individuals is going against the system by being inside the residence.

If anyone notices these individuals within their building make sure you let the person in charge know because they are probably not supposed to be there.

Prescription Services on Campus

Question: What if I need to see a doctor, where do I go?
Answer: There are two doctors on staff at Health Services (675-1151, ext 1067), one female and one male. Dr. C. Breton and Dr. Najgebauer. There is also an after hours walk-in medical clinic beside the Bancroft Centre Pharmacy, 1495 Bancroft Drive (560-5111).

Question: What if I am not from Sudbury and I am not registered at a pharmacy in town?
Answer: If you have a prescription from a doctor you can go to the SGA at G11 Student Street SSR (673-6547) before 3 p.m. and have your prescription delivered to you after 6 p.m. on the same day for free.

Question: What does the SGA health plan cover?
Answer: It covers 80% of all prescriptions. Over the counter drugs are excluded.

Question: What if I am already registered at another pharmacy?
Answer: If you call Bancroft Centre Pharmacy (560-5111) they will transfer your prescription and answer questions you have.

Question: I am still covered under my parents plan. Can I still get my prescriptions delivered to me for free?
Answer: Sure! All you need to do is call Bancroft Centre Pharmacy at 560-5111.

If you have any other questions don't hesitate to call Bancroft Centre Pharmacy at 560-5111 or the SGA office at 673-6547.

A VOICE IN THE CROWD

by PAUL D. BELLMORE

"... now I've got that feeling once again. I can't explain. You will not understand. This is not who I am..."

Hey, who says that you can't be random? Logic dictates and passion gets left by the soft-shoulder like roadkill. Some small animal, blood matted to its fur, twitching with aftershocks. Nice image eh?

Well, once again I stand before you with really nothing to say. Then why do these words appear before you? Tradition.

At this exact moment in time I'm lying on my bed with two pillows shoved under my chest listening to Pink Floyd, The Wall. How interesting you say. Why don;t you get to some point you say. O.K. I bought The Sound of Music soundtrack. Some of my favorite things are girls in white satin.

My buddy Brad was over here a little earlier and I asked him what I should write about and his answer was John Bilushi. I started thinking. He's dead. Alot of cool people are dead. Elvis, Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix, Bob Marley and Bob Dyon and Keith Richards are apart of the living-deep-fried-crispy dead. Before I start talking about dead-people I want to let you in on a tittle trivia tid-bit about Elvis. He is one of the most famous person known and associated by his first name only (Jesus is up there too). so anyway, if you're dead and famous at least you have a legacy that lives. Most people are more famous in death than in life. I think you're "real" death comes when not one human being ever thinks about you again. For the poor common slob who worked at a gas-bar that might be 15 years or so. But I guess it really doesn't matter anyway because well, you're dead.

I think I'm an the verge of a breakdown. I just had the strangest urge to go and sit in an a couple of games of bingo. "If you're looking for adventure there's a place I'd like to mention where you're sure to have yourself alot of fun. So drive your pick-up in the back-lot, come on in and win a jackpot when it comes to Bingo come to Bingo-One. Bingo-One if you're looking for a little bingo fun. It's the only one that matters, grab your dabber lets get at'er, when it comes to bingo come to Bingo-One".

Now that's entertainment. What beats a good bingo-jingle? For those of you who have hung around this long; hi and thanks for the jello-mold at Christmas.

I suppose I'm drawing to an end here. I want to leave you with an excerpt for Aldous Huxely's book, Brave New World, to think about,. At least there will be one thing in this article worth reading.

"They seemed to have imagined that it (scientific progress) could be allowed to go on indefinitely, regardless of anything else. Knowledge was the highest goal, truth the supreme value; all the rest was secondary and subordinate. But the emphasis shifted from truth and beauty to comfort and happiness. Mass production demanded the shift. Universal happiness keeps the wheels steadily turning; truth and beauty can't . And, of course, whenever the masses seized political. power, then it was happiness rather then truth and beauty that mattered." U n t i l w o r d s meet.....

Two Big Slobs: Mort & Aub

Mort: Hi, we're two big slobs. I'm Mort

Aub : And I'm Aub.

Mort: There's one thing that I know for sure: I live for pork!

Aub : Oh Hey! that reminds me. I went to an International Meat Symposium last week end at the Mine Mill Hall!

Mort: Ah man, why didn't you tell me You mean I missed out on the meat?

Aub : Yea, you missed it man. Free samples of everything the meat demigods had to offer.

Mort: Was it greasy and hot?

Aub : You bet, and it smelled like heaven!

Mort: Hey did you uh.....did they have any new experimental meat that you can fill me in on? That new grease-meat from Istanbul was choice last year.

Aub : Well, I don't know if it was grease meat but I found something that ranks on my all-star-meat-top-five! It's a new anti-flatulent meat stick that leaves you craving for more.

Mort: Will wonders ever cease? (They stare blankly at each other for a moment).

Aub : Hey Mort!

Mort: Yea Aub?

Aub : Have you had a good solid shit yet this year?

Mort: No, it just keeps on runnin' man

Aub : I think it's because you eat too much chili! You need to eat some arse-tightnener-(cheese).

Mort: Ah I've tried everything. Jello at night, bran, oat any kind of ruffage! My bowels just have a mind of their own! One day they're just gonna move.....out!

Aub: Maybe you need to use a tampon huh, huh, huh?!

Mort: Hey, maybe you could use a bra huh, huh?!!

Aub : O.K., O.K. Mort!

Mort: Hey Aub?

Aub: What?

Mort: Did you fart???

Come out and cheer on our own Sudbury Wolves as they play host to the North Bay "Cents", or just come out and party 'til you hurl!! There is also a Pool Tournament slated for February 8th at the Kingsway Hotel. Chalk up your cues, winners could win a trip for two to Hawaii,....NOT!!! For more information on these upcoming SPAD events contact Darren Gornall at 688-0543.

"ROCKS" Presents SPADLINE

Answers to last weeks trivia #12 are as follows. SI's 1991 athlete of the year award went to Micheal Jordan. The next question asked you to name the Cleveland Browns as the team the Broncos defeated in the AFC Championship Games. The last question had you name new Leaf Doug Gilmour, as the player who scored the Stanley Cup wining goal for the Flames in 1989.

The lucky winner of Rock's trivia-master t-shirt will be named in next week "line".

Now lets get to this weeks "line", #13. Don't forget to drop off your answers at the Phys. Ed centre in our drop off box, or bring them to room 104 MSR.

Basketball -Sixth Man/Woman Nite

This Friday Night night sees the return of Fork York Nite. Both the Womens (6:15) and Mens (8:15) basketball teams will take on their perennial rivals from the corner of Jane and Finch. Traditionally Laurentian fans have brought every imaginable noisemaker and dressed up in outrageous outfits to attend this event. The York teams often have found it necessary to move to the centre of the gym floor for their timeouts because of the noise. Come on out and be our Sixth man/Woman. The teams build of your emotion and your support.

As usual there will be prizes for the loudest residence or group, best noisemaker, best outfit..

You are worth at least ten points to both teams. help us make this a brutal trip for the York teams.

The Great Looney Challenge

On Saturday Nite at half-time in the women's' basketball game fan Lee Goodwin hit the jack-pot. Lee sunk a basketball from 1/2 court winning the $168.00 pot that had accumulated from the night before. Student's pay a looney for the chance to shoot from 1/2 court. The basketball team gaurantees a minimum of $100.00 prize and then puts in half of each looney collected each night.

The Looney challenge will pick up again this Friday when York comes to town and again on Saturday night when the men play the Bishops.

Laurentian University Athlete of the Week

Norm Hann

This week's Laurentian University/Pizza Hut Athlete of the Week honours go to Norm Hann of the Laurentian Voyageur Basketball Team. Norm, a fourth year Phys. Ed. student from Sudbury, led the Voyageurs towards a double victory against Carleton and Ottawa University this past weekend. Norm scored 17 points to help lead the voyageurs past Carleton by a score of 71-65. Not stopping there Norm poured in 37 points against Ottawa leading the voyageurs to a convincing 102-71 win. Norm's outstanding leadership and excellent scoring touch will be counted on heavily as the Voyageurs aim towards reaching the Nationals for a second consecutive year.

Congratulations to Norm Hann, Laurentian University/Pizza Hut Athlete of the Week.

WOMEN'S INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

Welcome back one and all from your hopefully enjoyable holidays. The second half of the season is underway and teams are looking better and better in tune-up for the playoffs. Here are the standings as of January 11, 1992:

The Politics of Music
What's Wrong with Barenaked Ladies

Chris Land
Editor-in-Chief

I viewed with horror the actions of the City of Toronto some weeks ago when they decided to prohibit any performance in that fair city of the band, "Barenaked Ladies". The reason that the city gave was that the name of the group could be considered offensive to some segments of society and therefore would not be allowed to play in the city. This action reminded me of the sentiments expressed in a letter to the editor that appeared last week from someone who was concerned that the intrusive power of political correctness had infiltrated Lambda over the decision to end the run of advice columnist "Dear/Cher Pierre."

Where the two items differ is that the decision to end Cher Pierre was made by the author. He had been under some pressure from me to tone down the comments in the articles somewhat, but I did not have a hand in making his decision. Rob Elliot decided to end the column because he was tired of the whining and complaining that some people were making over the content of the column. It wasn't until after the column had ended that anyone expressed in any specific terms that the column should be replaced by anything else or that this type of humor was offensive. Since the end of Pierre we have received a number of letters telling us how we did the right thing in ending the column, and other letters telling us that we should have stood up to the 'PC' (political correctness) goons and continued with the column. I will restate my thoughts on the whole matter by saying that I personally have chosen to interpret the Lambda statement of principals very liberally. Since the paper is owned by the students, I will print any student material unless it grossly violates Lambda's statement of principals. It is in my personal interest to curb the destructive forces of 'PC' in our society, and to enhance the principals of freedom of speech and of the press.

The actions of the City of Toronto are quite different in comparison. If "Barenaked Ladies" had changed the name of their group because a concerned person had informed them of the possibility that someone could take offence from their band name, or that they decided to change the name themselves for the same reason, that would be one thing. To have the band forbidden from performing in the City of Toronto just because some anal retentive, public official thinks that maybe someone, somewhere, may someday find the name of the band somewhat offensive, is offensive to me and people need to speak out against this kind of oppression before things really get out of hand.

I have listened to a few songs by this band and I really like what I hear. They have a few hilarious songs like "If I had a Million Dollars" and "I will be your Yoko Ono" that had me cracking up the first time I listened to them. As well, they have a song and new video of the old Cockburn tune, "Lovers in a Dangerous Time." They appear to me to not only have an enticing wit, but are also excellent musicians and good singers as well. Personally I think that the "Barenaked Ladies" version of this song is better than the Bruce Cockburn version.

Why is it then that such a band is being persecuted when they don't have offensive lyrics or stage performances? Other acts like Ozzy Ozborne have played in Toronto and there could be an argument made that his stage act could be offensive to many people. To me that is still no reason to ban him from playing, but it does demonstrate a huge inconsistency in the way Toronto views what is offensive and what is not. "Barenaked Ladies" are funny and good singers to boot. To ban them from playing in Toronto in my opinion is reprehensible. Would calling them "Barenaked Bums" or "Clothed Female Entities" be more suitable for Toronto. I'm sure that the people who live there wake up every morning and thank their lucky stars that the city will protect them from material that someone may find offensive.
